

Bibliography Writing

A bibliography is a list of sources used in informational writing. It is the last page and lists sources alphabetically by the author's last name. If a reader wants to know where you obtained information, the bibliography shows them.

The first line starts on the margin, but the rest of the lines are indented. A bibliography also requires exact punctuation and must include these five facts, if possible:

1. Author – last name first, followed by a period (.)
2. Title – italicized or underlined and followed by a period (.)
3. Place of Publication – followed by a colon (:)
4. Publisher – followed by a comma (,)
5. Date of Publication – followed by a period (.)

A. Good Examples:

1. Book with one author
Rinard, Judith E. Dolphins: Facts and Features. New York: Doubleday, 2012.
2. Internet (include as much information as possible)
Smith, Jean. "Wildflowers of America." The Online Encyclopedia.
www.onlineencyclopedia.com/science (March 2016)
3. Magazine article
Linden, Kristy. "Race Day". Readers Digest. August 20, 2012, p.76-78.
4. Film, Television, Video
Wisst, Brenda; director. Changes of the World. Pacific Video, 2011.

B. Bad Examples:

1. John Lassen. Arizona.
2. Internet Google.
3. Wikipedia. Spiders.

-
- Write the correct bibliography entry for each.

1. Alice read a book called Time Flies written by Traydon Breck in 2014. The book was published in New York by Dulles Press.
2. Klemm found internet material and used it in his state report. It is titled "Nevada Ghost Towns" written by C.J. Thomas for the website HistoricNevada.com. The article was published in Spring 2016.
3. Mrs. Fields used information for a presentation from the film Hooray for Ratios! Big Shot Entertainment filmed it 2015 in Atlanta, under the direction of Lea Cook.
4. For his class lesson, Mr. Anton used a magazine article called "Whoa, the Sun!" on pages 23-30 from Science Week Journal. It was written by Jane Gray and published in March 2017.

Bibliography Writing

A bibliography is a list of sources used in informational writing. It is the last page and lists sources alphabetically by the author's last name. If a reader wants to know where you obtained information, the bibliography shows them.

The first line starts on the margin, but the rest of the lines are indented. A bibliography also requires exact punctuation and must include these five facts, if possible:

1. Author – last name first, followed by a period (.)
2. Title – italicized or underlined and followed by a period (.)
3. Place of Publication – followed by a colon (:)
4. Publisher – followed by a comma (,)
5. Date of Publication – followed by a period (.)

A. Good Examples:

1. Book with one author
 Rinard, Judith E. Dolphins: Facts and Features. New York: Doubleday, 2012.
2. Internet (include as much information as possible)
 Smith, Jean. "Wildflowers of America." The Online Encyclopedia.
 www.onlineencyclopedia.com/science (March 2016)
3. Magazine article
 Linden, Kristy. "Race Day". Readers Digest. August 20, 2012, p.76-78.
4. Film, Television, Video
 Wisst, Brenda; director. Changes of the World. Pacific Video, 2011.

B. Bad Examples:

1. John Lassen. Arizona.
2. Internet Google.
3. Wikipedia. Spiders.

- Write the correct bibliography entry for each.

1. Alice read a book called Time Flies written by Traydon Breck in 2014. The book was published in New York by Dulles Press.
Breck, Traydon. Time Flies. New York: Dulles Press, 2014.
2. Klemm found internet material and used it in his state report. It is titled "Nevada Ghost Towns" written by C.J. Thomas for the website HistoricNevada.com. The article was published in Spring 2016.
Thomas, C.J. "Nevada Ghost Towns." HistoricNevada.com, Spring 2016.
3. Mrs. Fields used information for a presentation from the film Hooray for Ratios! Big Shot Entertainment filmed it 2015 in Atlanta, under the direction of Lea Cook.
Cook, Lea; director. Hooray for Ratios! Atlanta: Big Shot Entertainment, 2015.
4. For his class lesson, Mr. Anton used a magazine article called "Whoa, the Sun!" on pages 23-30 from Science Week Journal. It was written by Jane Gray and published in March 2017.
Gray, Jane. "Whoa, the Sun!" Science Week Journal, March 2017. Pages 23-30.